

BIOSIS Previews® on Ovid®

BIOSIS Previews delivers comprehensive life sciences data to support research projects, grant proposals, and trend analysis. By combining trusted journal content from Biological Abstracts with extensive non-journal material from Biological Abstracts/RRM (Reports, Reviews, Meetings) and more, it offers broad and authoritative coverage. Specialized indexing ensures precise, context aware discovery across traditional biology, interdisciplinary research, and related methods and instrumentation.

Access comprehensive global coverage of published biological and biomedical research, spanning:

- Traditional biology (botany, zoology, microbiology)
- Experimental, clinical, and veterinary medicine
- Biotechnology, environmental studies, and agriculture
- Interdisciplinary fields such as biochemistry, biophysics, and bioengineering

Key benefits and coverage:

- Explore over five decades of groundbreaking research, incorporating Biological Abstracts® and Biological Abstracts/RRM®. While the database primarily covers content from 1969 onward, it also includes select records dating back further, offering deeper insights into the history of life sciences and biological discovery.
- Access over 33 million records with extensive abstract coverage, including approximately 1.5 million new records added annually from over 5,700 journals and other sources.
- Gain complementary access to other Web of Science™ databases, featuring content from more than 1,500 biomedical meetings, as well as patents and book content not available in the Web of Science™ Core Collection or MEDLINE.
- Discover high-impact articles from peer-reviewed, influential journals and monitor additional content such as:
  - Conference and meeting reports
  - Reviews, technical letters, and notes
  - Software records
  - Books and book chapters
- Stay up-to-date with reliable, current content, thanks to weekly database updates.

...and more.
