Zoological Records
on Ovid®

Zoological Records is the world's oldest continuous database of animal biology, widely regarded as the leading taxonomic reference and a cornerstone of zoological research. It has long served as the unofficial global register of animal names, offering an unparalleled historical and scientific perspective on the animal kingdom.

Over its rich history, Zoological Records has evolved to meet the ever-changing needs of its users. Today, it stands as the most comprehensive and authoritative resource for biodiversity, systematics, and zoological information. The full collection consolidates over 160 years of invaluable data into one modern, digitized platform — re-indexed with contemporary terms and fully searchable, linkable, and ready to support cutting-edge research and discovery.

Why Zoological Records on Ovid?

Increase the depth of your discovery and capture all aspects of animal biology, paleobiology, and zoology in one resource. Zoological Records is an indispensable tool for researchers, conservationists, educators, and professionals in animal biology and related fields, offering:

- Vast source base: Derived from over 4,500 serials, it ensures comprehensive and authoritative content.

- Cutting-edge research: Stay updated on significant fields like biodiversity, ecology, conservation, and evolutionary studies. Check for new species descriptions, track changes in classification and relationships of organisms, and more.

- Broad subject scope:
  - Biodiversity and the environment
  - Taxonomy and classification
  - Veterinary sciences
  - Ecology, conservation, and wildlife preservation

- Extensive historical coverage: Access over 160 years of records with purchase of archives*, tracing the first appearance of animals in published literature.

Standard access includes the most recent year of content.
