Control legal costs, advance legal operations excellence

In the current unpredictable economic climate, legal departments across industries are asking themselves a difficult question: How do we drive value and deliver better business outcomes while continuing to grow and mature the legal ops function?

A majority of general counsel have reported that their departments are coming under pressure to continue performing despite staffing challenges and smaller budgets.

Reducing legal spend can make a big impact on the company’s balance sheet.

Up to 10% savings on legal spend
Up to 20% improvement in billing guideline compliance
Faster and better decision-making with improved outcomes
Improved efficiency, including the ability to free up attorneys’ time for more value-added work

Source: FTI Consulting 2023 General Counsel Report

In the past year, almost 80% of law firms have had rate increases.

Almost 80% of general counsel have reported that their departments are coming under pressure to continue performing despite staffing challenges and smaller budgets.

Our total spend management approach addresses legal ops pain points by combining the best characteristics of e-billing and advanced technology, including artificial intelligence, to improve performance.

More than three-quarters of general counsel expect a strain on the legal department.

These common limitations cause legal departments to miss out on opportunities for savings, but they can be addressed with the right technology:

- Increasingly complex billing guidelines
- Incomplete visibility
- Lack of data insights

Total spend management helps legal departments reduce spend leakage.

Learn more

Learn more about Wolters Kluwer ELM Solutions’ comprehensive approach to total spend management that addresses the external pressures facing businesses today.

© 2023 Wolters Kluwer ELM Solutions, Inc. and its affiliates and/or licensors. All rights reserved.