
Global Health Database

The definitive international public health database

CABI's Global Health is the only bibliographic and full-text database dedicated specifically to public health research and practice.

The database's open serials policy and inclusion of international and grey literature allow for unique coverage; compared to PubMed®, 54% of its journals are unique to Global Health, and 70% compared to Embase®.

Everything from proceedings, reports, theses, electronic only publications, and other difficult-to-obtain sources are included.

Subject areas include:

- Infectious diseases
- Chronic and non-communicable diseases
- Nutrition and food science
- Health and wellbeing
- Environment health
- Medical entomology
- and more.
