Transition to Practice Program

The challenges of EBP and QI for nurse residents and leadership

Teaching and supporting evidence-based practice (EBP) and quality improvement (QI) project requirements for nurse residency programs is complex and requires a significant amount of effort and close supervision. Nurse residents can be intimidated by their first journey with EBP, held back by inexperience, disconnected resources, and insufficient guidance.

At the same time, leadership often doesn't have in-depth oversight that enables them to support projects, and this can result in inefficient workflows and unnecessary frustration.

How Ovid Synthesis can help:

Ovid Synthesis is an all-in-one simple solution that empowers residents to contribute to the culture of EBP. Not only does it enrich curricula and competencies, but it decreases workload and excites residents to lead future research that is critical in their career ladder.
